Introduction

Beverly Hills/Morgan Park is Chicago's “Village in the City.” This beautiful residential community grew up during the 1860s around the construction of the Rock Island commuter train line, now the Metra. After the Great Chicago Fire of 1871, the villages – which later became the Beverly Hills/Morgan Park neighborhood – rapidly expanded. Many of the city's business and political leaders built homes and mansions along the hill that forms the highest land in Chicago. Now a thriving city neighborhood, Beverly Hills/Morgan Park offers the amenities of suburban living with the excitement of urban lifestyle.

The Ridge Historic District runs through the heart of Beverly Hills/Morgan Park. With more than 3,000 buildings, it is one of the largest urban districts on the National Register of Historic Places. The neighborhood also features five Chicago Landmark Homes, three Chicago Landmark Districts, and many historic Chicago Bungalows. Neighborhood homes – many designed by noted architects such as Frank Lloyd Wright, Walter Burley Griffin, Daniel Burnham and Howard Van Doren Shaw – represent every regional architectural style built between the 1844 and World War II, including Prairie School, Victorian, Gothic, English Tudor, Art Moderne and Colonial Revival. Vintage homes make Beverly Hills/Morgan Park an ideal choice for people who want a residence that is both historic and affordable.

Rolling hills, spacious yards and more than a dozen parks make it hard to believe that Beverly Hills/Morgan Park is a city neighborhood. It takes just 30 minutes by train to reach the Loop. Metra commuter trains stop every four blocks at quaint neighborhood stations, many of which are part of the Rock Island Station Historic District and have been restored. CTA and PACE bus service and nearby expressways are convenient transportation options for commuters and visitors.

Transportation:

Rock Island/Metra Train Stations:
91st, 95th, 99th, 103rd, 107th, 111th, 115th and 119th Streets

Bus Service:
CTA & Pace

Beverly Hills/Morgan Park families demand academic excellence. Public schools are ranked among the best in Chicago and academic programs developed here have been modeled in classrooms across the city. Private and parochial schools provide a variety of educational options and excellence. First-rate preschools and Montessori programs offer superior choices in early education.

Civic Associations are very active, providing meetings, programs and activities that address issues of importance and social opportunities. All neighborhood residents are invited to become involved with their associations, and representatives from these associations comprise the Beverly Area Planning Association's Council of Delegates. BAPA, founded in 1947, serves the entire community with programs in housing, safety, community advocacy, school support, and commercial development. Civic Association-sponsored events include the See and Ski Beverly cross country skiing in Dan Ryan Woods, Christmas in the Park, Beverly Hills/Morgan Park Garden Walk, holiday decorating contests, and more.

The 38,000 people who live in Beverly Hills/Morgan Park are from diverse backgrounds with at least one thing in common - they've discovered the Village in the City, a long established but progressive community that is Chicago at its best.

For more information about Beverly Hills/Morgan Park and opportunities to visit, become a neighbor, or invest in commercial districts, call the Beverly Area Planning Association, 773.233.3100 or visit us on-line at www.bapa.org.
